

WudaTime

New Time Tracking application

WudaTime is launching its beta version. This web based Time Tracking tool helps you track the time spent on your projects and see team productivity at a glance.

The screenshot displays the WudaTime web interface. At the top, a progress bar indicates 'Looking for a time tracking app - 78% (5/6)'. Below this, there are three user avatars with their names and time spent: 'Mike Drop' (35h 22m), 'John Drop' (35h 22m), and 'Carla Drop' (35h 22m). A central blue character is holding a smartphone. To the left, another blue character is pointing at a '22:22 Time' display. Below the avatars, there are three checkboxes: 'It has to be free', 'Awesome user experience', and 'I want it simple'. A text input field labeled 'Add to-do here' is followed by a 'Confirm' button. At the bottom, there are two checked items in a list: 'Perfect for freelancers, start ups, designers and project managers' and 'can it also be nice, please?'. Both items have a timestamp of '10:54:22 12/09/2013'.

Its simplicity and neat design provide a fluid User Experience, which avoids losing time while tracking time and project dedication.

The beta version is full of awesome and usefull functionalities showcased right here.

 You can add tasks, projects and clients and easily play them.

 See visual information on how a project is going using progress bars

-  Create and manage to-do lists to complete a task: add items, check them, and reorder using drag & drop

-  Invite colleagues and collaborators to participate on a task or project

-  You can also add time entries manually in case you didn't use the player

Now you can beat timesheets with WudaTime . We are already working on new features, such as reports, attaching documents and more, to help you manage your projects

Our main objective right now is having users' feedback, so just Sign-up and give it a try!

WudaTime team
www.wudatime.com

Sign up